

Course Number

CLS-153-01

Course Description

Students will discover how ancient Mediterranean societies interacted with the natural world, as revealed by history, art and literature, and archaeology. Some of the questions we will investigate include: how did the Mediterranean environment affect and determine everyday life, both in cities and in rural areas? How did ancient societies manage their food supply? What was their view of nature? How did they react to ecological crisis? And, finally, how can we use their outlook on and treatment of the environment to inform our own approach?

Academic Term

22/WI

Instructor

Commuto, Angela

Location & Meeting Time

Karp Hall-105+ M/W/F 01:50PM-02:55PM LEC

By Permission of Instructor

Y

Credits

1.00

Capacity

30

Total Students

30

Additional Information

<http://www.union.edu/Classics>

Common Curriculum

LCC Languages & Cultures

HUM Arts & Humanities

Interdisciplinary Programs

Environmental Science & Policy

Academic Department

Classics

Field Of Study

Classics (CLS)