Course Number CLS-153-01 Course Description Students will discover how ancient Mediterranean societies interacted with the natural world, as revealed by history, art and literature, and archaeology. Some of the questions we will investigate include: how did the Mediterranean environment affect and determine everyday life, both in cities and in rural areas? How did ancient societies manage their food supply? What was their view of nature? How did they react to ecological crisis? And, finally, how can we use their outlook on and treatment of the environment to inform our own approach? Academic Term 22/FA Instructor Commito, Angela Location & Meeting Time Wold Center-225+ M/W/F 01:50PM-02:55PM LEC Credits 1.00 Capacity 30 Total Students 30 Additional Information http://www.union.edu/Classics Common Curriculum LCC HUM GCHF Interdisciplinary Programs Environmental Science & Policy Academic Department Classics Field Of Study Classics (CLS)