

Course Number

HST-122-01

Course Description

This class examines period dress as a foundation of the designer's creation of costumes for the stage. We will be analyzing cultural influences of the exterior world, the psychology of dress, period movement, and the expression of self through choice of dress. Required study sessions will develop investigative methodology through hands-on work with vintage clothing and textiles. Throughout the term in-depth writing will be expected of the student to expand their understanding of the topic of historic dress as presented through the medium of professional research papers.
