

Course Number

HST-336-01

Course Description

This course will focus on major interpretive issues that surround the presidency of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. We will study how historians have disagreed, over time, on issues such as: Was FDR a raving radical or the best friend of big business? Was the New Deal a good deal or a raw deal for African Americans? Was World War Two a good war? Could FDR's administration have done more to prevent the Holocaust? This is a reading-intensive, discussion-centered class that requires active student engagement.

Academic Term

22/FA

Instructor

Morris, Andrew

Location & Meeting Time

Feigenbaum Center for Visual Arts-216+ T/TH 10:55AM-12:40PM LEC

Credits

1.00

Capacity

19

Total Students

17

Additional Information

<http://www.union.edu/History>

Common Curriculum

SOCS

WAC

Interdisciplinary Programs

American Studies

Academic Department

History

Field Of Study

History (HST)