

Course Number

HST-275-01

Course Description

This course is about relationships, exchanges, and tensions among the people and nations of the Americas from the mid 19th century to the present. The most powerful foreign influence (political and otherwise) in Latin America has consistently been the US, often with quite negative consequences. In the 21st century relations between the US and Latin America have changed dramatically. China has replaced the US as the most important trading partner for several countries, particularly Brazil, the largest economy of Latin America. In addition, the US is experiencing a demographic transformation with an increasing number of immigrants from Latin America making up the populations of just about every state. The history of the US and Latin American is increasingly a shared history. In this course we will look at interconnections, comparisons, and the common links between Latin America and the US in what is now a history of both foreign and domestic relations.

Academic Term

21/FA

Instructor

McGrath, Elena

Location & Meeting Time

Karp Hall-005+ M/W/F 01:50PM-02:55PM LEC

Credits

1.00

Capacity

25

Total Students

14

Additional Information

<http://www.union.edu/History>

Common Curriculum

LCC Languages & Cultures

SOCS Social Science

Interdisciplinary Programs

Latin American Studies

Academic Department

History

Field Of Study

History (HST)